Columbus to Honor Christopher

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP)—Christopher Columbus was a tall, good-looking man with end eyes. His eyes may have been sad because he suffered from pain.

He was possibly the greatest sailor in history but on his first trip to the new world he ran his ship Maria, around like a mackerel.

Columbus was a faithful man but he was no fool. He told everybody all he knew. On that first voyage he kept two sets of records—one for the king and one for himself. The king's were truthful already and he figured what they didn't know wouldn't hurt him.

There's a question about this second figure. Some authorities say Columbus was born in 1441, not 1451. The Library of Congress is inclined to think it doesn't make a great deal of difference, and goes along with the majority.

Anyhow, its exhibition is pretty fascinating and features a number of the maps that permeated Columbus' world was round—even though they led him to think there was no such place as America.

The spotlighted exhibit is a beautifully colored map published in 1482 from an original by Ptolemy, a second century Greek whose notions of geography were still current in Columbus' time.

"Ptolemy underestimated the size of the earth and overestimated the extent of Asia," explained Richard Murphy, head of the library's map reference section. "Thus it seemed entirely feasible to reach the Far East by sailing west."

Columbus, of course, thought he had reached the Far East when he caught sight of the West Indies. He never budged from that belief, either. In fact he later had all his crew members sign an affidavit that Cuba was part of the Asiatic mainland.

One more thing you ought to know about Columbus day in Washington.

A direct descendant of Columbus, 17 generations removed, is placing a wreath today on the statue of his distinguished ancestor in front of Union station. He's an hereditary five-star Spanish admiral, 26 years old, here on a visit.

His name: Christopher Columbus.

Peron Given Time Off

Buenos Aires, Oct. 12 (AP)—Argentina's congress gave president Juan D. Peron a six-month leave of absence last night. Peron said he wanted to campaign for reelection as a private citizen to forestall criticism at home and abroad.

In separate bills passed yesterday, the house and senate agreed to the leave, to expire April 30, 1952. The election, in which Peron seeks a second term, is scheduled Nov. 11.

The bills also invited Latin American labor leaders and journalists to witness the elections.

NO SURVIVORS BY WILL HENRY

DISTRIBUTED BY MEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY of John Slatemeyer, captured and adopted by Sioux Indians, is engaged in fighting a duel to the death with Slatemeyer, a whiskey hunter who captured North Star, an Indian medicine man, whom Slatemeyer loves. It has been slightly retouched, but Slatemeyer's life has been seriously slashed twice.

XXII

I COULD not follow Slatemeyer. For neither of my hands had survived the pressure of his strength with enough force left to grip the blade properly. I could not risk losing the knife by striking at him, even though his left arm dangled uselessly.

Then as I watched him approaching I saw something. A little thing, the kind upon which battles turn. Just before he began to move in, the fingers on his left hand, the "useless" one, flexed, unflexed, then flexed again.

My mind jumped. Either that dangling arm had been a ruse all along or he had just gotten back use of it. At any rate he was playing it as a ruse now, not knowing I was on to the game.

When we were six feet apart Slatemeyer erupted into motion. I saw his jaw muscles twitch a hair of an instant before he leaped and I released my whole power toward my one objective, his "useless" left arm.

The knife came sliding from his good right into his bad left hand a light flash before my teeth buried themselves in the bones of his left wrist. The heavy boy's knife thudded into the dust beneath us. The guests had paid off. He had tried the Sioux hand-shift. Had I not seen the fingers of that left hand flex themselves before his leap, the broad blade would have been resting in my vitals, not dust.

We were rolling over and over, he snarling and grunting as he sought eagerly for my knife-arm.

Surging upward I managed to bridge my body enough to free my left arm. Flunging this upward I seized the knife from my pinioned right. Just before Slatemeyer's groping paw closed over it.

My head was buried on his right shoulder so that I looked over it and down his back. Looping the left arm clear, around behind his head, I struck, burying the blade hilt-deep in the muscles of his right shoulder, ripping downward and deeply from shoulder-point to elbow.

The white bone showed sickeningly as I felt the arm go limp, allowing me to roll free.

I think he was in shock those last moments, for he was not a man but a white-faced, slaving, starling-eyed brute. Giant that he was, he had taken three gaping wounds, of which either of the first two would have killed an ordinary man. He had been suffering intense pain and heavy blood loss for 10 minutes.

I stepping inside his blind groping then, whipping the lean length of the Toledo blade into him as I came in. A shudder ran over the big body and, as I stepped quickly away from it, it slid slowly to its knees in the dust.

I stood over him, motionless, while a thousand Oglaala joined me in the payment of a respect of silence to this strange, fearless man. Not a Sioux there but knew he had seen a warrior die.

THEN I did what I had to do, working quickly with Yellow Bird's thin knife.

Coming to my feet I faced the Sioux. A low swelling "Hguni Hguni" swept their ranks, dying away into the night as I stepped across the circle toward Star.

"Receive my offering," I intoned harshly, and snapping the upraised knife blade downward and forward, I flung Slatemeyer's heart into the center of the fire before her.

Coming to her feet, Star held me with her eyes. In a voice hardly loud enough to carry above the crackling flames, she replied, "And receive you, my offering."

With the words she raised the sacred buffalo-hide doll high above her head and flung it after the heart of the whiskey hunter into the fire. The little doll burned brightly for a moment and was gone. There was a long gasp from the watching Sioux, then silence.

Star stood defiantly, her eyes sweeping the ranks of her tribespeople. A shadow fell between her and me. Crazy Horse stood before us.

Here was another of those unpredictable Indian instants. I had brought the heart of her violator to their holy woman and this was right. But she in turn had cast from her the symbol of her holiness, reminding, in the passion of the act, her holy status. This might prove very much wrong.

Judging from the shocked mutterings among the medicine men, this latter seemed very likely.

"I respect them," called out Crazy Horse, unexpectedly. "It is our way of doing things."

An angry, sullen growl sprang up among the medicine men.

THE war chief continued, facing them challengingly. "That which was holy within her she has flung after the heart of him who destroyed it in her. She has already told me this on the sun of her capture. Now that which is woman, remaining in her, she would bestow upon him who avenged her. I say this is right. Let them walk in peace."

The scowls and bitter denunciations of the medicine men were lost in the thundering shout which went up from the warriors.

"Hun-hun-he! Let them walk in peace."

I leaped over the fire to Star's side and she rose to meet me, casting from her shoulders as she did, the white elk robe of the Wyand Wakon.

I swept her into my arms and together we made our way to my tipi through the milling, howling mass of warriors already beginning the celebration dance of our nuptials.

Pork Prices Not Down as Reported

Washington, Oct. 12 (AP)—The American Meat Institute took issue today with a recent agriculture department report that prices of pork had not declined in line with a recent drop in hog prices.

The department, in a report on the livestock and meat situation, said last week that prices of hogs had declined in August and September from mid-summer peaks. It added, however:

"Prices of pork at wholesale and retail changed little in August and September from mid-summer peaks. It added, however:

"Prices of pork at wholesale and retail changed little in August and September. The declining prices of hogs therefore meant that marketing margins became wider after having narrowed at mid-summer."

Officials told a reporter today the report was based on details figures from livestock markets and from good price reports of the bureau of labor statistics.

It is dangerous to use water on electrical and grease fires. It conducts electricity and scatters burning grease.

Bettors Like Churchill Group

London, Oct. 12 (AP)—Britains betting population, getting more of its money down on the outcome of the Oct. 25 general election, is showing increasing faith in the chances of Winston Churchill's Conservatives.

The odds against a labor government victory shot up to 3 to 1 in one of London's leading haddock shops today.

At the same time the big betting house, Douglas Stuart Ltd., cut the odds against Churchill and his Conservatives to a prohibitive 1 to 4.

Thus a Labor party backer can put up one dollar to win three, while those who want to bet on the Conservatives must put up four dollars to win one.

Last week Stuart offered only 7 to 4 against labor and 2 to 5 against the Conservatives.

Showman Rose Locked Out by His Wife

New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—Showman Billy Rose was locked out of his fashionable town yesterday following an estrangement from his wife, 37-year-old Eleanor Holm.

The whole affair may lead to divorce court proceedings, according to Miss Holm's attorney.

Newsman were present when Rose drove up to his 23 Beckman place mansion in a chauffeured car. The 50-year-old stage producer put a key in the front door lock, but it didn't work.

"Wrong key," he said, and left. Fifty minutes later Rose returned with a new set of keys, but with the same results. No key would fit. Repeated ringing of the door bell brought no one.

A maid opened an upstairs window and stared at Rose, but neither spoke. She closed the window.

A butler had told newsmen that Mrs. Rose was not at home.

Rose retired to his apartment in the Ziegfeld theater, which he owns. Neither Rose nor Miss Holm would comment on the divorce rumors but their lawyers were not so reticent.

Rose's attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays, said: "The stories which have been spooned to certain newspapers are undoubtedly intended for coercion and as a prelude to high monetary demands."

"Neither Mr. Rose nor I intend to indulge in this kind of mud-slinging."

The attorney repeated his clients offer of "adequate provision for his wife in the former swing star wanted a legal separation or divorce."

Louis Nizer, attorney for Miss Holm, denied feeding stories to newspapers but added: "The press will get a very vivid story when the papers are filed."

Rose and Miss Holm were married in November, 1939, the year he and the late singing comedienne, Fanny Brice, were divorced. Rose and Miss Brice were married 10 years.

Miss Holm formerly was the wife of Band Leader Art Jarrett.

ordination of our facilities and those of the SPA the enormous block of 150,000 kilowatts of power could be furnished. "We are committed to have the power ready for the new operation."

The full 150,000 capacity of Bull Shoals dam is to be available by December, 1952. The A. P. L.'s new 100,000 kilowatt steam plant at Lake Catherine is expected to be ready by December, 1952. A. P. L. also has plans for a 135,000 kilowatt plant in 1953 and another 130,000-kilowatt plant in 1954.

Another is said to be a tacit understanding that the output of Bull Shoals will be dedicated to Reynolds' needs. However, details of the contract between A. P. & L. and SPA have not been worked out.

The 60,000 tons of production allocated to Reynolds is the usual located portion of a big expansion program started by the government after the war, in Korea began. Most of the rest of it already has gone to Reynolds, Alcoa and to Kaiser industries.

This 60,000 tons had been sought by Spartan Aircraft Co., Tulsa, Okla., for an integrated plant it proposed to build near Little Rock. Governor McMath of Arkansas saw President Truman Wednesday on behalf of Spartan, urging that some production be allocated to an independent.

However, Fulbright said that it appeared that another expansion program is in the offing to meet domestic and defense needs and that he sees no reason why Spartan can't seek part of this production.

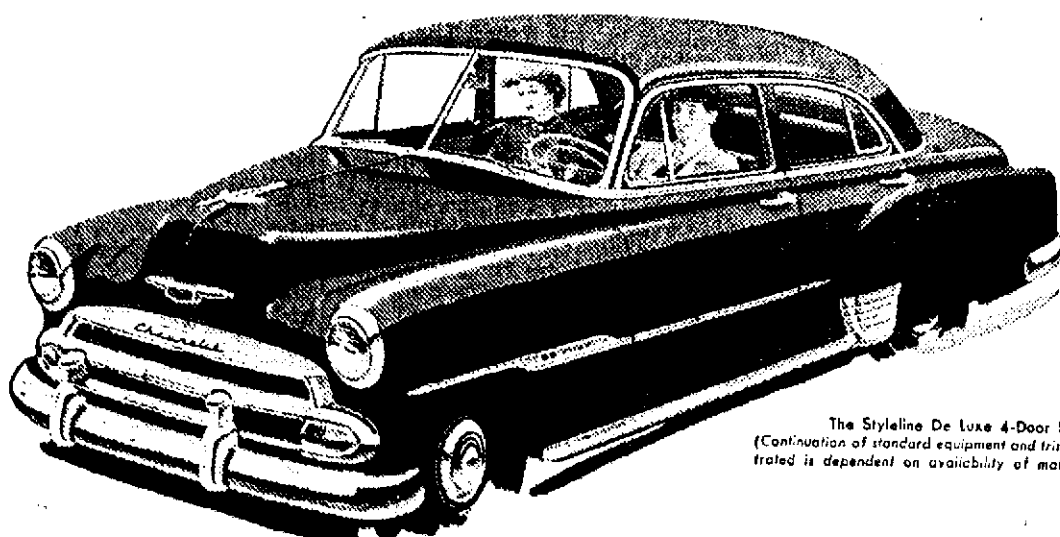

"I'll be glad to help them with it," he said.

Sunday School Lesson

A puzzling and embarrassing incident in the Bible is the story of Abraham's lapse from truthfulness in representing his wife, Sarah, to his sister, when they were confronted with danger in Egypt (Genesis 12:10-20).

The incident is so at variance with everything else that is recorded of Abraham, a record remarkable in every way, that one can only regard it as the sort of lapse that does sometimes occur in the lives of men whose general character and action are on a high plane.

It seems strange to think of a man of faith and courage, a peace-loving and magnanimous preventer of strife between his herdsmen and Lot's, and the utterer of a high and beautiful prayer, resorting to a cheap lie. He lied out of fear for his own life and gave no thought to the fate of Sarah.

It was a lapse in the life of a good man, not at all indicative of the high character in which everywhere else Abraham appears. The case of Jacob, Abraham's grandson, is very different.

Jacob, in his early life, at least, does not appear as a good man, lapsing into a temporary act, or character, of weakness or evil. In contrast there is in him something fundamentally bad. He is a schemer and trickster, mean and selfish. A glimmering of something better appears in his romantic love for Rachel, and he does ultimately give every indication of having become a better man.

But no glossing over of the evil in the early life of Jacob can make him better than he was. The evil in him was deep, underlying his trickery and vicious scheming. Yet that early evil made the transformation in his character all the more significant.

Two things, I think stand out boldly as we consider Abraham and Jacob. One is the link of Abraham, as that no man should be judged by any one incident, or phase, of his life. Even good men may lapse and fall at times, and should be judged only by their whole record of character, purpose and achievement. And the other, as we think of Jacob, is that no man's character, however evil, is necessarily fixed. Even a bad man may become a good man.

The experience of passing from badness to goodness, from death unto life, as the Apostle John defines it, we commonly associate with the saving power of the Gospel. But Jesus did not invent or originate the Gospel. He proclaimed, and gave effect to, what is in the eternal nature of God and man. He spoke of Abraham as seeing His day, and in seeing it being glad. So Jacob, in the experience

DOROTHY DIX

Love Comes Later

Dear Miss Dix: Should a girl of 18 feel discouraged if she doesn't have a steady boy friend? I recently graduated from high school and have a job as legal stenographer. I am considered pretty and have lots of girl friends, but I am lonely. My girl friends date boys whether they care anything about them or not, but I can't do this. If I do, I am miserable for the entire evening. Also, most of my friends have been in love time after time. I've never even had a case of "puppy love." I want to fall in love, but I can't.

JANE L.
Answer: While discrimination in the choice of boy friends is undesirable, don't carry your aloofness so far that boys will think you're disdainful of them. The theory that men flock to the cold-hearted beauty who cares nothing for them was a favorite theme for novelists at the turn of the century. It is not, however, the way for a modern miss to catch a man.

Study his interests

We like people who like us, who are interested in us and our activities. That is true of almost every one. If you want boys to like you, cultivate an interest in masculine activities. Learn to understand and participate in sports. Bring out your own talents especially in music, that appeal to boys, and see how quickly a spark of enthusiasm brightens their eyes. That's your first step.

When the boys do come a-calling, don't expect each one to have all the attributes of your Prince of life, and in the providence of God, may be thought of as similarly anticipating the day of the Gospel.

His wrestling with the divine messenger (Genesis 32:24-30) is the widely accepted symbol of man seeking God's blessing and a better way. But the evidence in the transformation of Jacob I find in the incident of his returning, wealthy and prosperous, to face the possible, and just, vengeance of Esau, whom he had wronged. Esau appears nobly in that incident. But Jacob, by thinking only of others and their safety, sheds his selfishness and redeems his tarnished Charming. An ordinary looking lad may, upon further acquaintance, blossom into the one and only. Love at first sight is encountered more often in theory than in actuality, so don't expect too much from a date. A pleasant, well-mannered boy can provide a nice evening out, with good companionship. For a starter that's all you need.

As for love, that, I assure you, will come. Many girls have waited longer than you to fall in love, and have never regretted the delay. Its much better to keep Cupid waiting than to rush into marriage with the first boy that gives you heart flutters, than live to regret it the rest of your life.

Dear Miss Dix: I am 16 and have been married for a year to a 31-year old man. He is jealous of me and won't let me go anywhere except our room. I am very frightened of him as he continually threatens to kill me, or scare me so that no one else would ever want me. My sister raised me, and I could go back to her but he says if I do he will kill us all.

R. M.
Answer: You certainly need someone to look after you. If your sister can take you back, I think you'd better go. You can disregard your husband's threats. A bully who could sink so low as to threaten a 16-year-old girl wouldn't have the gumption to swat a fly. You need the help of your sister or an older relative to straighten out your trouble. Seek it as soon as possible.

Dear Miss Dix: We are a neighborhood of about eight girls between seventh grade and sophomore year. We all come from very suitable homes, but two of the girls are ruining our parties by petting. There are always chaperones at our parties, but when they leave the room, these two girls take advantage, when the begin to neck, the rest of us go.

THE GANG
Answer: If these friends spoil neighborhood parties by improper behavior, I think the chaperones should be informed. After all, older people are present to assure a good time for all. If possible, exclude these girls from all parties.

until they get the idea that their actions are not meeting with unqualified approval.

Film on Arkansas Almost Completed

Russellville, Oct. 12 (AP)—Filming of the motion picture "Seven Wonders of Arkansas" virtually has been completed, says the owner of the production company.

Mrs. Viva Ruth Life, head of the Life Wonder State Motion Pictures, Inc., said yesterday that 75,000 feet of film has been shot. The film has been sent to Hollywood for editing and processing, she said.

Mrs. Life, in an interview with L. L. Bryan of Radio Station KZRR, Russellville, disputed previous reports that financial troubles had halted the filming of the picture.

Bryan quoted her as saying that neither she nor anyone "officially connected with production" had been questioned about the report. Last week, a Robers, Ark. stockholder said production had been stopped and some actors, cameramen and other personnel had returned to Hollywood. He said employees, representing five unions, had not been paid for as much as two weeks.

Mrs. Life denied that the actors had not been paid, said Bryan.

"CHILDREN'S TOYS"

Hong Kong, Oct. 12 (AP)—A steady flow of "children's toys" is coming into this British crown colony from Red China.

Antique dealers, using acetate, remove a coating of new-type American enamel and the "toys" are exposed as precious Ming dynasty vases—export banned by the Reds.

This Church Page Is Published Weekly With the Hope that More People Will Go to Church.

The signals are called, the ball is snapped, the game is on! Twenty-two alert men trained to perfection and timed to a fraction of a second. Yes, these fellows are keyed to a high fever of expectancy. The best athletes are the fellows who live the cleanest lives on the way up. The church helps greatly in preparing men morally for just such great tests. Yes, there are Two Groups of Substitutes on the sidelines but none quite ready to deliver. Neither is there any substitute for the influence of the Church in a man's life.

There is no substitute for character and morality, for integrity of soul. The supreme demand is for the genuine and the true. You and I are on the team for goodness and for God. Our friends, our neighbors and all our classmates expect us to be ready to play to win in true sportsmanship manner. We can offer no substitute for our best. The church is a good place to learn His will for the game of life and on the gridiron. In the church we learn to live and play the Golden Rule way. Reverence and gratitude and devotion to a man's Highest Friend must be real. No substitute will do.
